What Is a Contact Language? - ThoughtCo

A contact language is a marginal language (a type of lingua franca) used for purposes of basic communication by people with no common language. English as lingua franca (ELF) , says Alan Firth, is a "contact language between persons who share neither a common native tongue nor a common (national) culture, and for whom English is the chosen foreign language of communication" (1996).

Definition and Examples of Language Contact - ThoughtCo

Language contact is the social and linguistic phenomenon by which speakers of different languages (or different dialects of the same language) interact with one another, leading to a transfer of linguistic features.

Abstract: Peter Siemund | Language Research Centre
Peter Siemund University of Hamburg. Multilingualism necessarily produces language contact and frequently leads to language change. In many of the contemporary multilingual societies we find English as one of the languages involved, as it is the language with the widest geographical dispersion, often an official language and usually the first choice for global communication. This has given
