Patrick White's The Aunt's Story is one of the most beautiful books I've ever read, but it's also - without a doubt - one of the most pretentious books I've ever read. It's full illiterate verbal sludge and overly ambitious nonsense. However, I'm glad I read it, I would suggest that you only read this if you already have an interest in Modernist literature and a lot of time on your hands.

The Aunt's Story is Theodora Goodman's story. The novel begins with the death of her mother, finally freeing Theodora, who had long been caring for her. Theodora's life contrasts with that of her sister, Fanny, who is married and has some children. All Theodora has managed is to be a spinster -- and an aunt.

The Aunt's Story is the third published novel by the Australian novelist and 1973 Nobel Prize-winner, Patrick White. It tells the story of Theodora Goodman, a lonely middle-aged woman who travels to France after the death of her mother, and then to America, where she experiences what is either a gradual mental breakdown or an epiphanic revelation.

The Aunt's Story by Patrick White 'You'll see a lot of funny things, Theodora Goodman. You'll see them because you got eyes to see. And they'll break you. But perhaps you'll survive. No girl that was thrown down by lightning on her twelfth birthday, and then got up again, is going to be swallowed easy by rivers of fire.' And now Theodora began to think that perhaps the man was a little bit mad.
