Talese/Doubleday: 310 pp., \$26.95. I've long been partial to E.M. Forster's formulation that the role of fiction or one of them, anyway is to suggest a "buzz of implication," a flavor of its time and place more nuanced than history allows. That's because fiction is an art of narrative, of emotion, defined by the singular movements of individuals as they navigate specific corners
